When the heart fit came to light, you used a grand slam force to discover that North held the queen of trumps. West leads a trump and East follows. How do you plan to make your ambitious contract?

Tim Bourke's Problem - Solution

It may seem that you will need to finesse in diamonds at some stage. However, you have eleven winners - four in trumps, six in spades and in one diamond. So all you need to do is to ruff two clubs and you will have a total of thirteen. Suppose the full deal is:

You win the trump lead with dummy's nine and ruff a club with the ace (retaining the ten). You re-enter dummy by overtaking the ten of trumps with the queen and ruff a second club with the king of trumps.

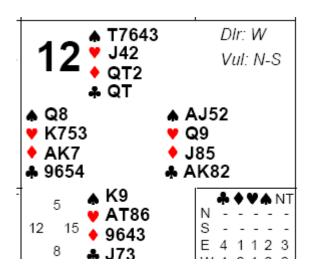

Next you return to dummy with the nine of spades to draw West's remaining trumps with the J-7, discarding the queen-jack of diamonds from hand. As your hand will have only winners left, your slam has rolled home.

Tough 3NT Times Two

Bruce Neill

Twice in round 6 of the Seniors, West opened or rebid a weak notrump, and partner raised confidently to 3NT with a balanced 15 count.

On board 12, the layout was:

Dummy's confidence was quickly dashed when the cards lay badly and North found the killing heart lead. Two off, in the end.

How can West redeem himself on board 16? Here's what declarer saw:

North led the spade 3 (fourth best) to the 6, 4 and queen. Declarer tried a heart to the jack and queen. South returned the spade 5 to the jack, king and 9, and North switched after some thought to the club 10. Time to decide. What's your plan from here?

Noting that the spade 2 is still missing, the opening lead may have been a five card suit. If North doesn't want to set his suit up, he doesn't look like a man with the heart ace. If so, it should be safe to finesse the club, and later to knock out the heart ace.

The danger of rising with the club ace is that South, with a hand like will be in control. Whether you play hearts or clubs next, he can set up a winner in that suit, and cash it when he gets in with the other suit.

At our table, a world class declarer duly finessed, only to discover that South's actual hand was Avi Kanetkar grabbed the club king and returned that sneaky spade 2! As North, I then won the heart ace and cashed the setting spade trick. Whew ... nice to find that defence!

Which Tricks?

David Lusk

Peter Chan and David Lusk managed to take two tricks against 6♥ on the layout below. Can you guess which cards took them?

Well, they were the ♥8 and ♥10!

The auction:

West	North	East	South
1♦	1♠	2♥	2♠
4♥	Р	6♥	End

2♥ was natural and non-forcing.

Peter (South) led the ♠2 to the Queen King and Ace. Declarer ruffed a spade and cashed the ♠A. A diamond was ruffed in hand and another spade ruffed on table.

Back to hand with a further diamond ruff, declarer ruffed his last spade with the VK. On this trick, Peter made the key discard of the diamond King.

Declarer played the ◆Q which North ruffed with the 8. When declarer discarded his club on this trick, North was left on lead to play a spade which promoted South's ▼10.

Your partner has a weak two in one of ther majors. What do you lead?

Australian Seniors Bowl representative, Bill Haughie chose the ♥6, reasoning that this was more clearly indicative of honour third in hearts than the ♠8 would indicate honour third in spades.

On this layout, it was an excellent choice.

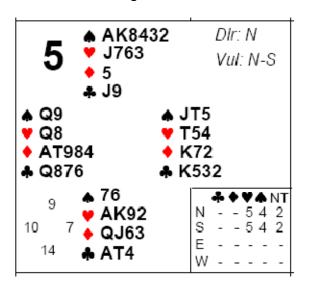

Andy Braithwaite's multi is no thing of beauty (even third in hand, not vul) but once Bill led a heart declarer had no hope. The VJ scored trick 1 and trick 2 went to Bill's Ace of clubs. Bill now knew the heart position and so continued with the Queen. Declarer did well to cash up for one off. A losing finesse in either diamonds or spades would have meant two off.

Parenthetically, Ron Klinger points out that Andy's multi would have provided no difficulty for his partnership. Over 2♦ West would bid 2♥ - a takeout of hearts. East is immediately aware of the spade fit. In the same way, 2♠ over a multi 2♦ is a takeout of spades.

Bill was also tickled by the manner in which he made a heart game in the same match.

Bill opened 1♠ as dealer and Andy replied 2♠. A 2♥ rebid from Bill saw Andy bid game.

A club was led and Bill ducked in dummy for West's Queen to score, Bill dropping the Jack. West cashed the •A and continued the suit, causing Bill to ruff. This was somewhat inconvenient as it threatened to make it impossible to establish the spades and enjoy them.

Bill now led the ♣9 and finessed dummy's 10, ruffed a diamond back to hand which dropped the King from East. The two top trumps saw West's Queen appear and suddenly Bill had no more losers.

Art Gallery Tour

What a starry night indeed! Congratulations to the Summer Festival of Bridge convenors for organising a wonderful, private tour on Thursday night to the "Masterpieces from Paris" at the National Gallery.

It was an absolute pleasure to be able to view this splendid exhibition with ease and comfort and no crowds.

Many thanks to all concerned.

2♦ was weak and quite likely to be 5 carded.

 Chris Quail led the ♠2 which put declarer to an immediate guess on this layout.

Ten quick tricks and two more easy to develop in diamonds but...

Declarer played for Chris to have led away from the Jack not the King and was one off.

 This looks easy – God doesn't give you an AK suit to have you look elsewhere for a lead and so it eventuated on as the top spades were followed by a spade ruff.

A bit unlucky for David McLeish and Bob Gallus as a 2-2 spade break (or a singleton Ace or King) or any other lead sees EW +800 instead of -200.

Worrying Times

Cathy Chua and Michael Ware dominated the first seven rounds of the Last train event. They picked up a number of 25's and only had one loss and that by just 16-14. However, they could still be caught in the last round and Michael was feeling distinctly uneasy after ten of the sixteen boards. They had not gone at all well. In fact, at that point they were actually 23 imps down. But then came boards 27 and 28.

This, of course is the Chris Quail lead hand from the previous page. At Cathy and Michael's table the auction went:

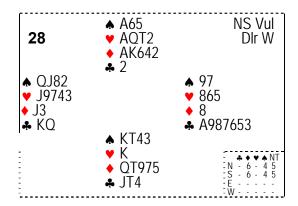

- 1♣ from West.
- 1♦ from East and Michael thought about doubling for a lead. Manfully, he restrained himself.
- 2♣ from West
- 2♥ from East and Michael thought about doubling for a lead. Manfully, he restrained himself.

3NT from West.

6NT from East.

And Michael blessed his own restraint when Cathy led a low spade for one off.

Then the next one landed:

Cathy opened 1♦ after a pass from West.

Michael responded 1♠. Cathy reversed into

2♥ and Michael tried 3♠, natural and game forcing. Cathy showed three card spade support with a 3♠ bid. Michael regrets his next decision which was to Keycard for spades. The reasons for his regret is that he is going to play in diamonds. If he merely forces then Cathy will Keycard and she can then evaluate the hand in the knowledge of the Keycards and also the ♠Q.

Cathy's response to RKCB was 5♦ to show 0 or 3. Michael assessed that three Aces and the (presumed) ♦K still didn't make enough for Cathy to reverse. As she had shown 5-4 in the reds and 3 spades, the club position was not a concern. Eventually Michael decided that Cathy was long odds on to hold the ♥Q and so he bid 6♦ though he was still worried about were Cathy's third spade was going to go.

East chose the unfortunate lead of the ♣A which crashed his partner's Queen. This meant that Cathy could readily establish the ♣10 for a spade pitch.

After these two, Cathy and Michael could breathe much more easily and they won the event with something to spare.
